FOREWORD

The Filipino taste for food is a mixture of the cookery of the peoples of the world, particularly the Chinese, Spanish and American. In addition to the truly Filipino preparations of Sinigang, Pak-siw, Bulanglang, Puto and Kalamay, Filipino dishes include foreign foods like Pancit, Lumpia, the Sarciados, Roasts, Macaroni Salad, Spaghetti with Tomato Sauce, Leche Flan, cakes and puddings. Practically all these foreign dishes have acquired a certain native character as recipes are adapted according to availability of ingredients, tolerance for certain spices, facilities in the kitchen and also the variation introduced by the individual's taste. The process of assimilating international influences is a continuous one since modern travel and communication help expose the Filipino taste to a variety of foreign foods. The Sukiyaki, Sate Babi, Curry, Pizza Pie, Lasagna and many others have fast become favorites.

The Maquiling Ladies' Club brings together in A MELTING POT the wealth of recipes accumulated over the years by the housewives and cooking enthusiasts in the international community of Los Banos and by their friends. Many of these recipes, which have been favorites of long standing in the households of their origin, have been handed down from mother to daughter to granddaughter, and eventually passed on to neighbors and friends. Kitchen-tested for years, the recipes often carry tips personally discovered by the contributor. As a form of service, therefore, the Club provides the medium through which these numerous recipes are organized and made easily available to all. Since it is expected that this cookbook will find its way to friends and Filipinos living abroad, the Club has tried to include recipes traditionally associated with the Filipino table, whether for simple daily fare or for parties and fiestas. For many others interested not only in Filipino cooking, A MELTING POT offers as well favorite recipes contributed by foreign residents in Los Banos.

The Club also seeks to help the housewife in her task of meal planning. The cookbook is a handy reference where a housewife may find both the usual and the unusual. In some instances, it offers two or more versions of the same dish, each version possessing its own merits. Furthermore, not only does the cookbook offer some useful kitchen tips, but it also attempts to quantify many unmeasured ingredients in preparations which have relied on the a-little-of-this-and-a-little-of-that method.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This recipe book could not have been put together if people had not generously contributed to their recipes to this project of the MAQUILING LADIES' CLUB. To its many friends, therefore, who so kindly contributed to this recipe collection, the Club expresses its deep gratitude.

The CLUB also begs the indulgence of its readers and contributors for whatever errors have been overlooked in the preparation of this recipe book.

Salt and pepper to taste

Frying oil

POT ROAST OF PORK

Jean Kauffman

1-2 kg. pork or beef
1 onion, in 1/4" slices
3-4 potatoes, whole or halved
2-3 carrots, whole or halved lengthwise
1 cup water and milk, in equal parts
2 tbsp. flour
Salt and pepper

Choose roast-leg or ribs with at least 1/2 inch of fat left on. You can leave skin on, but there will be a lot of fat that you will have to spoon off; however, the skin will get crispy.

You can use beef instead if it is fairly tender. Choose chuck or shoulder roast.

In a pan or skillet large enough so that the meat can fit in and be covered tightly, over medium heat, brown the meat slowly on all sides. Do not add any fat. This will take about 1/2 hour, but it is necessary for good flavor. Generously sprinkle with salt and pepper and lay onions on top of roast. Add about 1/4 to 1/2 cup water (enough so that the pan has about 1/2" water) and cover tightly. Bring to a boil over high heat, and then turn down heat immediately to a simmer. There should be just enough water to steam meat slowly. Open the lid once in a while and add another 1/4 cup water as necessary. Cook slowly until very tender (meat will start to pull away from bone). During last half hour of cooking, add potatoes and carrots. Again add water as necessary and simmer until done.

To make gravy for the potatoes, remove all vegetables and meat from pan. If there is quite a lot of liquid, add one cup of well blended water and milk with flour and stir over low heat until all pan drippings are loose from the bottom. Then turn heat up and bring to a boil to thicken. If there is only fat and meat drippings in the pan, remove any excess fat, leaving only about 2 tbsp. in the pan. Add 2 tbsp. flour, stirring well until flour-fat is bubbly. Remove from heat and gradually blend in 1 cup water or water and milk until smooth. Put over heat again and cook slowly, stirring constantly until all pan drippings are loose. Then bring to a full boil. Add more milk or water to desired thickness of gravy. Add more salt and pepper as necessary. If you didn't add the vegetables, the roast will be dry and you will have the dry-pan-drippings. In that case serve the gravy with mashed potatoes. Otherwise, serve gravy with the browned potatoes that were cooked in the pot.

Slice roast across the grain. Put a bit of gravy on top. Other typical accompaniments to pork roast are cabbage slaw or applesauce.

SUKIYAKI NO. 1

Yoshiko Yoshida

Sauce:

- 1 cup cooking wine
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 cup soy sauce

Ignite cooking wine, add sugar, soy sauce and the water in which mushrooms had been soaked. (If you like a sweeter sauce, add more sugar).

- 1 pc. of suet
- 8 to 12 leeks, cut slantwise
- 1/2 kg. (or about 1 1/4 lb.) paper-thin sliced beef (rib-eye roast, sirloin, top round)
- Approx. 225 gm. (1/2 lb.) sotanghon soaked in water
- 1/2 pc. soft bean curd (tokua)
drained for a while and cut into 8 cubes
- 8 mushrooms, fresh native mushrooms or dried (soak dried mushrooms in water and save water)
- 3 cup bamboo shoots or ubud, sliced
- Approx. 225 gm. (1/2 lb.) spring chrysanthemum or native spinach, cleaned and washed
- 1 cup long sprouted mongobbeans (togue)
- 1 to 2 cup beef broth
- Fresh eggs, for each serving bowl

Arrange all the ingredients attractively on a plate. Prepare two jars, one with beef broth, another one with the sauce prepared above. Put the iron pan or a frying pan on the table. When it is fairly hot, melt a little suet in it, then add the leeks, then a little of the meat. When the meat has slightly browned (don't overcook), pour in the sauce. Add the vegetables and meat. Add some more sauce and the broth if necessary. Correct the seasoning and it's ready to eat. Keep the flame high to prevent the meat juice from draining out and leaving the meat tasteless. Gradually add meat and vegetables as you eat, adding the sauce and the broth. Break one egg into your bowl and slightly beat it. Dip the crisp hot meat and vegetables into your egg and eat. Serve with plain white rice and salt pickled vegetables. Serves 4.

Hints for good Sukiyaki:

1. Do not mix each vegetable and meat in the pan.
2. Do not add too many vegetables or meat at a time.
3. Do not overcook, especially the meat.
4. Correct the seasoning frequently.

Dip each piece of prawns or vegetables into the batter. Drop a few at a time into the oil and cook till a golden brown. Drain. In case of green leaves or snow peas, drop two or three pieces together.

Spread paper napkins on each plate, and arrange fish and vegetables attractively. Put a small heap of ground radish topped with ground ginger on each plate. Serve together with individual bowls of warm tentsuyu sauce.

- 3 cups fresh milk
- Lemon rind

Then mix all the ingredients in a bigger container and cook for 30 to 40 minutes, stirring constantly, until the mixture sets and appears transparent. Remove the lemon rind. Transfer mixture to flat-bottomed dishes about 2 inches deep to cool and set some more. Then slice to desired size and shape, topping each slice with a pinch of "latik".

Cook the thick coconut milk on low heat for about 1 to 1 1/2 hours, stirring now and then until oil comes out and the frothy cream on the surface settles down as a sweet brown residue. Remove the oil and scrape off the residue.

FRESH YOUNG CORN PUDDING NO. 2

(Popular as "baki" to Visayas)

Nora Flores

Except for the greasing butter, use the same ingredients called for in No. 1. For variety, substitute thick coconut milk for evap milk. And for a more rustic touch, omit the eggs and melted butter, leaving only the scraped young corn kernels and its milky juice, coconut milk and sugar to taste. This mixture is then spooned into very native and very original molds made out of young corn husks, overlapped and folded at the tapered ends and tied around with husk strips to form empty shells or tubes with open mouths. Fill the shells 2/3 full. Stand them in a deep container with an inch of water at the bottom and steam until mixture becomes firm

BIBINGKA

(This goes well with iced or hot tea for an afternoon snack)

Victoria Ela

- 2 coconuts, grated
- 2 cups glutinous rice (malagkit)
- 1 tsp. salt
- 3 1/2 cups brown sugar
- Anis seeds

Extract pure coconut milk. Set milk aside. Make a second extraction from the coconut pulp to make 3 1/2 cups more or less of thin milk.

Place the thin coconut milk in a carajay. Add the glutinous rice and salt and cook the rice until it is dry, stirring now and then to prevent the rice from sticking to the bottom of the container and burning. Lower the heat and add 2/3 cup brown sugar. Line a bibingkahan (a native clay oven) with wilted banana leaves. Pour the mixture of rice into it, smoothen the top and then pour over it the thick coconut milk, the rest of the sugar and a few seeds of anis. Set the bibingkahan oven, i.e., put live coals below and on top (in the cover). Bake the bibingka until the top turns brown.

You can bake the bibingka in an electric or gas oven instead of in the native bibingkahan. Bake the bibingka at 350°F. Slice and serve hot with iced or hot tea.

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS

Shopping Guide:

It is always economical to plan meals several weeks in advance. Plan simple, nutritious, palatable and economical meals. Keep your family happy and healthy. Children fed on a balanced diet of nourishing foods are brighter, better looking and more resistant to disease.

Before you start grocery shopping, make a list of all the things you will need for a particular length of time. In the grocery, keep to your list if you wish to avoid costly impulsive buying.

Meat:

Meat is a vital food, a good source of minerals, particularly phosphorus and iron and of the B vitamins.

But meat is expensive. It is worthwhile for the housewife to get acquainted with different cuts of meat and their uses in order that she will know what cut to use for a particular dish and how to serve appetizing meals suited to the family budget.

Meat may be cooked by dry heat like roasting, broiling, panbroiling, or frying for tender cuts, or by moist heat like braising, stewing, or simmering in water for less tender cuts.

Cook meat at low temperature. Gentle simmering reduces shrinkage and helps retain flavor and juices. Meat becomes tender and uniformly cooked with less fuel consumption. Spattering is avoided, there is less watching and less work in cleaning pans, racks and ovens.

To cook your Chinese ham: boil ham in water. Discard water and scrape surface of ham with a knife. Simmer ham in pineapple juice until ham is tender and juice almost dries up. Remove skin from ham, pat fat with brown sugar and place under broiler till ham turns a deep golden brown.

Poultry is a very perishable food that must be kept cold when raw and quickly chilled after cooking if it is not to be eaten at once.

Vegetables:

Avoid waste. When you buy vegetables to last for a week, follow a plan for using them.

Leafy vegetables should be used within three days.

Fruit vegetables continue to mature even in the cold so that you may find the ampalaya overripe or your okra tough after a few days. Eggplants and sayote may rot in spots.

Vegetables lose some of their essential vitamins and minerals when no longer fresh.

Salads:

Salads are economical and hearty.

Select greens that are fresh, crisp and dry. Get fresh fruits that are plump, ripe, juicy and free from blemishes.

Choose canned fruits for appearance and quality.

Protein foods used in salads, like meats, poultry, eggs and seafoods should be fresh.

Wash salad greens thoroughly.

Greens for tossed salads should be torn to pieces, not cut with a knife.

Cucumbers are more decorative unpeeled; just run the tines of a fork lengthwise down the cucumber.

Add only enough salad dressing to coat the greens. Too much dressing will wilt your lovely crisp greens. Toss greens with salad fork and spoon after you add the salad dressing.

For crisp salads, add dressing only immediately before serving.

To insure equal distribution of seasoning in salads, season mayonnaise or any salad dressing before it is added to the salad.

For fruit salads, combinations of fruits are limitless. Use an interesting focal point, such as a bowl of dressing or a tempting fruit or a special garnish. Then group your fruits around the focal point in an attractive design.

Color contrasts are very important in the arrangement of a large salad tray or an individual fruit salad.

Fruits like avocados, bananas and apples darken when sliced. To prevent discoloration, dip the cut slices in orange, lemon, pineapple or calamansi juice.

Beverages and Juices:

Calamansi juice should be served cold, the slightest hint of heat may remove its essential substances.

Garnish fruit beverages with slices of lemon or decorate with slices of fruit frozen in ice cubes.

Vinegar:

When you cook with vinegar, do not stir the mixture until it boils. There will be a raw vinegar taste if you stir the mixture before it boils.

Herbs and Spices:

When several herbs are used in any one dish, one herb should predominate over the others; otherwise, you will have a clash of flavors.

Refrigerate chili powder, paprika, and cayenne pepper to keep them fresh longer.

Season to taste only and measure carefully to enhance rather than to smother flavor.

Buy herbs and spices only in small quantities. A little dried herb or spice goes a long way. Herbs and spices lose flavor with time. Store them in airtight containers away from heat and sunlight. Renew your herb and spice stocks once a year even if your old stock is not used up.

Add herbs and spices during the last part of cooking. Add at the same time as salt and pepper.

If you are using herbs and spices in a dish that does not require cooking, let the herbs and spices stay in the dish for a few minutes.

Use too little of any herb rather than too much — just enough to heighten natural flavors

A pinch of oregano added to canned tomato sauce makes a savory addition when the sauce is to be used with meat or fish.

Utensils:

Aluminum. To remove dark (water or food) stains, boil a solution of 2 tbsp. cream of tartar in 1 qt. water for 5 to 10 minutes in the utensil. Then scour with steel wool soap pad to restore shine.

Enamel ware. To remove stains, put a solution of 3 tbsp. chlorine bleach and 1 qt. water in the pan. Let the solution stay in the pan for 5 minutes.

Cakes baked in too large a pan will be pale, flat, and shrunken. When baked in a pan of the right size, a cake will have a good shape and a rounded top. When baked in too small or too shallow a pan, a cake will bulge over and lose contour.

Baking pans with straight sides give a more velvety texture.

Shiny aluminum or tin pans distribute heat evenly and give a delicate golden brown crust to the cake.

When using glass baking pans, reduce oven temperature by 25° and use the same baking time called for in the recipe.

How to measure the capacity of an odd-shaped pan. Fill pan with water. Measure water. Use 2/3 amount of water for batter in creaming method cake. Use 1/2 amount of water for double-quick method cake.

Icings:

To repair butter icing, beat 2 tbsp. butter vigorously with a fork until butter turns light colored. Then add damaged icing little by little, beating vigorously. Beat with mixer when you have combined enough to beat about 1/3 of the icing.

Yeast:

Fresh compressed yeast will keep about 2 weeks in the refrigerator and about 2 months in the freezer. Dry yeast in granular form will keep long in the refrigerator.

Lukewarm water (about 105°-115°F) is used to dissolve yeast for baking bread. Too much heat can kill the yeast.

Yeast will not grow without sugar. The substitute for sugar in yeast bread recipes is honey, molasses or brown sugar.

Monosodium glutamate (abbreviated msg. in this book):

Msg. is a white crystalline seasoning that brings out the natural flavors of many foods. Add during last minutes of cooking to enhance flavor. Use these approximate economical accounts to get good results:

- 1 tsp. per lb. of ground beef (or less than 1/2 kg.)
- 1/2 tsp. per lb. for roasts
- 1/2 tsp. on each side of individual steaks
- 3/4 tbsp. per 4 servings of vegetables
- 1 tsp. per lb. of chicken or pork

Freezing tips:

Sauces and mayonnaise separate during freezing. Mayonnaise is best kept in the refrigerator.

Do not completely cook your casserole if it is to be frozen as some part of it will become soft when reheated.

Fried foods will lose their crispness when frozen.

Add only a small amount of fat to food which will be frozen. Fat becomes rancid after about 2 months.

Hardcooked egg whites will become tough and rubbery when frozen.

Salad greens and raw vegetables should not be frozen. Vegetables that need to be frozen should be blanched before they are frozen.

Diced potatoes should be added just before heating casseroles. They will crumble if frozen with other ingredients.

Some flavors become strong when frozen; therefore it is best to underseason. The flavor of garlic, cloves, pimienta and green pepper becomes strong after freezing. Onions lose flavor.

Do not refreeze thawed foods.

Glass containers should be filled only 2/3 full if used in freezing foods like milk, preserves, etc.

If cooked macaroni, spaghetti and rice will be frozen, cook them until barely tender for best texture.

SOME PROFESSIONAL SECRETS

For more even browning and a perfect golden color, use unsalted butter for grilling sandwiches.

When spreading butter, horseradish sauce, prepared mustard, mayonnaise, cream cheese or your favorite spreadable on bread, take it all the way to the edges and corners of each slice.

Whenever possible, use only enriched or whole grain bread for your sandwiches. Enriched means that three essential B-vitamins — thiamine, niacin and riboflavin — and that important mineral, iron-nutrients needed everyday for good health — have been added.

Only the daintiest tea sandwiches require that the crust be trimmed from bread. Crusts will help keep the edges of the bread from drying out and curling.

When assembling several sandwiches at a time, keep the bread moist by covering with a dampened cloth or paper towel.

Never cook eggs in boiling water; just simmer.

Spoiled eggs rise in water. Fresh eggs will sink to the bottom.

Chill melon in refrigerator in paper bags to prevent spread of odors.

Handle pastry quickly to prevent toughening.

Use as little flour as possible in rolling pastry to prevent making pastry tough.

Chill ingredients well before making pastry; chill pastry dough before rolling it.

In pre-baking pastry crust, fill crust with raw rice to prevent rising and shrinking of pastry.

Marinate less tender cuts of meat in oil and vinegar or lemon juice to tenderize.

For fluffy rice, do not remove cover during entire cooking period.

Store bread in refrigerator, or better still in freezer, and thaw in a pre-heated oven for 5 to 8 minutes before serving.

Bananas should not be stored in the refrigerator as they are, but there is a way to preserve them in good condition. Put bananas in tightly covered or sealed glass jars before refrigerating them.

Onions can be handled without tears if they are stored in covered containers in the refrigerator vegetable bin; the most aromatic onions won't cause tears if they are well chilled.

To keep dampness from affecting flour while it's stored, tuck a bay leaf into the canister. The dried leaf absorbs moisture.

Set the oven timer (always keep one in your kitchen) not at the exact minute the baking or roasting will be done, but to sound off a few minutes earlier. With advanced warning, another chore need not be dropped at an inconvenient moment.

When cooking spaghetti or macaroni or any noodle, add a tbsp. of cooking oil to the water. The oil keeps the water from overflowing and prevents the pasta from sticking together.

For tastier pasta or rice, add a chicken or beef bouillon cube to the cooking water.

Shape hamburger patties or meat balls with wet hands for an extra fast and neat job.

To reheat pasta, pour boiling water over it and drain. Never reboil pasta.

Count on heat to expand glass when a cork won't pull out of a bottle. Wrap a hot cloth around the neck of the bottle and as the neck opening enlarges, the cork will loosen and can be removed easily in one piece.

To separate two glasses that are stuck together, try this method: place the bottom glass in warm water and then pour cold water into the top glass. The glasses will separate without breaking.

Sift flour before storing it in canisters.

It is easier to separate egg yolks from egg whites right after taking them out of the refrigerator, that way there is less danger of breaking egg yolks.

When you bake, have all ingredients at room temperature.
